Cookie Policy

Updated 12 October 2026

1 What cookies are

Cookies are small text files saved on your device when you visit a website. They help the website function, remember preferences, measure performance and improve the experience where consent is given. We may use similar technologies, such as pixels, SDKs and local storage; the term cookies in this policy includes those technologies.

2 How we use cookies

Essential: for login, security, session management and operation of the website and platform.

Preferences: to remember language, region and certain platform settings.

Optional analytics: to understand usage and improve performance and the user experience.

Optional marketing: to measure campaigns and display relevant messages where applicable, subject to consent and legal requirements.

3 Your choices and consent

Essential cookies are used to operate the platform. Optional analytics and marketing cookies are used only with the required consent. You can change preferences through the cookie notice or settings, where available, or through platform settings.

4 Managing cookies through your browser

Most browsers allow you to delete existing cookies or block new ones. Blocking essential cookies may prevent login, access to protected pages or the use of certain features.

5 Third party cookies

Providers of hosting, lessons, video, payments, analytics and security may place cookies when supplying their services, and their own policies apply. Cambridge One is an external platform, and its policy applies to its use. Where a preference centre is available, it displays an updated list of the cookies and tools used.

6 Retention periods

Cookies may be session cookies that disappear when the browser closes, or persistent cookies that remain until they expire or you delete them. Retention varies according to purpose and settings.

7 Do Not Track signals

Your browser may send a Do Not Track signal. There is no single global standard for responding to it. Cookies are primarily managed through the consent choices described above.
